

reframing migration

Tuesday 9th February 2016
Central Saint Martins,
1 Granary Square,
London,
N1C 4AA

WORKSHOP (13:30-18:00, Room C303)

13:30 Setting the scene

14:00 Case study presentations

15:00 Group work

18:00 End

DISCUSSION (18.30-20:00, Room D115)

18:30 Reframing migration: what, why and how

18:45 Presentation of results from the groups who attended the day workshop

19:30 Feedback from invited discussion panel

19:45 Open discussion

20:00 End

Looking around, we can recognise several examples of migrating people catalyzing and contributing to new ways of meeting everyday needs - collaborative initiatives and organisations demonstrating in practice how inclusion can be promoted by creating conditions for migrants and resident communities to explore new ways of living and working together.

Thanks to these activities, we are seeing the “migrant problem” turned on its head, where migrants and resident communities are co-producing solutions that provide opportunity for the whole of society.

This event will explore examples of these positive practices to better understand how to create the conditions for migration as social innovation. Taking a whole system approach, seeing all people as contributors, strengthening community cohesion and defining an approach which can be extended and applied elsewhere.

ual: university of the arts
london
central saint martins

DESIS
NETWORK
Design for Social Innovation
and Sustainability

